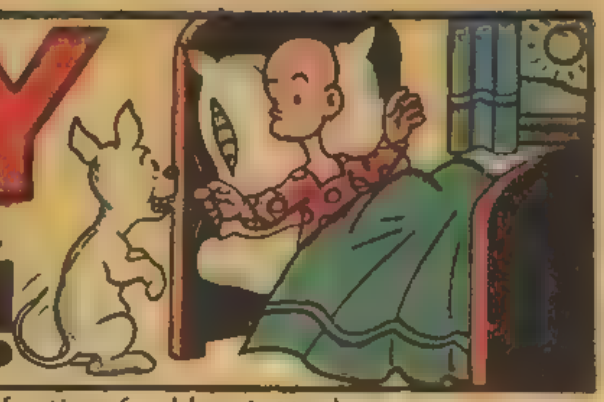
DUSTY COMES THROUGH — FOR HENRY!



Dusty was more than just a lovable, friendly pooch. He was Henry's companion, often his servant, and a constant source of comfort when things looked dark.

AND, DUSTY WAS SMART!

He worked hard at his job of keeping Henry happy and contented in every way. He learned as many new tricks as an old dog possibly could. There was the time, for example, when Henry admired a fine-looking pointer at the town's annual dog show. Dusty never forgot it! He labored like a horse to perfect his stance, and did pretty well at it too. But, try as he might, Dusty could not make his curling tail straighten itself out when he attempted to imitate the impressive show dog.

Then one Monday morning, when Henry's mother was busier than usual in the laundry, Dusty managed to dip his tail into a pan of starch. For the rest of that day, at least, he pointed with the best of them, much to Henry's surprise and delight.

On another occasion, during the summer, Henry was looking for a job and saw a "BOY WANTED" sign. He entered the store after whispering a few words of instruction to Dusty. When other applicants approached the place, Dusty set up such a din by howling and barking that they all retreated in a hurry, and, of course, Henry got the job. Oh yes, Dusty could pretend he was very angry when the situation called for it!

He also learned not to chase Henrietta's gorgeous cocker spaniel, Fifi, which helped romantic matters between his master and Fifi's mistress. (To be perfectly truthful, Dusty's regard for Fifi about equalled Henry's affection for Henrietta.)

However, there was one simple doggie routine that always proved too difficult for Dusty—in spite of the fact that most ordinary canines in the neighborhood went through the chore every day. That was the job of going to the corner newsstand for the daily paper. Dusty had never successfully completed the round trip. He either lost the nickel, dropped the paper, or let it fly into the wind due to some distraction along the route.

He had a tendency, too, to show off with money. The result was the loss of many nickels and much confidence. This weakness caused Dusty to brood, and quite possibly made him feel inferior to the other dogs on the block.

Henry never lost patience with Dusty. He'd just pat his pup's head and say, "Never mind, pal. There'll come a day when you'll take a nickel, and return with a paper as surely as a Saint Bernard. Wait and see."

Dusty noticed, though, that Henry went for his own paper each day, to make sure he kept up his regular enjoyment of the comic strips!

One bright morning, just before school resumed its fall session, Henry awoke leisurely, yawned, and settled back into the pillows for a few more moments of delicious relaxation. Dusty watched him from his basket alongside the bed.

"Won't have many more mornings like this," Henry announced, slowly. "I may as well make the most of it. Now if I only had the paper, I could read the funnies." Then, noticing the hurt look on Dusty's face, he said quickly, "Aw, I wasn't trying to rub it in, old boy."

Henry reached toward the bureau, fingered a shiny new nickel, and placed it between Dusty's teeth. "Go ahead, fella, show me what you can do," he laughed.

Dusty couldn't yelp with delight, but he threw a wide grin at his boss, and wagging his tail furiously dashed out of the room, determined to come back with the paper this time.

He ran down the street, but with great care. He remembered not to try to flip the coin in the air He must hold onto the nickel and come back with a clean newspaper.

To prove how anxious he was to make good, Dusty passed up a lollapalooza of a dog fight. Julius' and Blimp's mutts were going at it, tooth and nail, but while our hero would have given a hambone to see it, he kept doggedly on his way.

He even went past the butcher shop as though it were the CITY POUND, and ignored the pleas of a nice old lady who wanted to scratch his ears.

Yes, Dusty was making good

THAT IS, UNTIL FIFI CROSSED HIS PATH!

Now, Fifi always made Dusty as excited as a pup in a pet shop window when he sees a child—but today, Fifi looked even more beautiful than ever. She had been brushed and groomed prettily, and wore a bright red ribbon.

Dusty gasped in admiration. His mouth hung open, the nickel fell out, and worst of all rolled into a grating. It was the same old story, the same old failure.

How could he go back and face Henry this time?

Dusty took one last lingering look at the departing Fifi, and then tried to stick his paw down through the iron bars, but couldn't quite make it. He thoughtfully measured the length of his tail, and the depth of the grating. He thrust his tail through the opening.

Gosh! he could feel the nickel, but alas, could not pick it up!

Dusty looked up, with new hope. Coming toward him was "Bubble" Mike. Mike was never without a big chew of bubble gum and that was exactly what Dusty needed now.

"Hi, there, Dusty," greeted "Bubble" Mike. "How's the friendliest dawg in town?" With that, he blew a tremendous bubble, like the artist he was.

Thinking rapidly, Dusty assumed his most ferocious expression and let out a rumbling growl! Mike, taken completely by surprise, opened his mouth wide with amazement and the wad of bubble gum dropped neatly out.

Dusty plunged the point of his tail into the gum, lowered it down the grating, and withdrew it as triumphantly as Henry landing a big fish. Then, barking a "Thank you" to the astonished Mike, he tore down the street, the nickel flashing merrily in the morning sun.

He was back in the house in two shakes of a dog's tail!

Proudly happy, Dusty held the crisp newspaper out to a beaming Henry, who simply said, "I knew you could do it all the time. We can do anything, if we only try hard enough."

They laughed at the funnies together, that morning, particularly at a comic strip about a boy and his dog.

(It was Dusty who laughed longer and louder . . . . He was thinking of a certain news dealer, who, at that moment, was the owner of — A VERY STICKY NICKEL!)
